Nancy Wilson is a Master Naturalist, Master Gardener, and Native Plant Society of Texas volunteer. She is currently the Dallas coordinator for the Native Landscape Certification Program and is certified for Levels I-IV and Landscaping for Birds. Nancy has been gardening for the benefit of birds, bees, and butterflies for over 20 years. Her yard provides natural food, shelter, and nesting sites for the many species of birds who provide hours of entertainment year after year.

Nancy will give a presentation on “Landscaping for Birds.” Watching colorful birds eating, nesting, and raising their young is a great way to enjoy and marvel at nature. Setting up feeders is fun, but wouldn’t you like to learn how to provide the plants and environment that can bring birds to your yard in a more natural way?

All living creatures need food, water, shelter and a place to raise their young. When you provide these elements in your landscape, you create a bird-friendly habitat! You will enjoy seeing birds up close and noticing their beauty and behavior. In addition, landscaping for birds creates a beautiful yard.
