

Jocelyn Womack is a past bird zoologist with the Dallas Zoo who is currently on the board of directors for Audubon Dallas where she coordinates their bird walks and birding field trips as well as the National Audubon Society's Climate Watch program. She is a nationally published expert in many aspects of small population management, bird husbandry, incubation and hand-rearing. She is a life long birder and North Texas area birding by ear specialist and loves to share her love of birds with others.